Safety rules online

When we navigate the internet we can incounter a lot dangers.The internet is very dangerous on all types of platforms from social media to games. Here are some rules that u should follow for your safety:

You should never give out personal information, even if it's a very small amount like your real name, your age, your adress and more.

You should always make reaserch on what you download because if you dowland a dangerous app and it has acces to your personal information, there is a risk it will be sold.

Links or attachments in e-mails can be infected whit malware.Such malware can infect your device and destroy all data

The primary danger of talking to strangers online is ecountering cybercriminals. They would use various tactics, to steal any type of information from an unsuspecting internet user.

You can't always trust what you read online. For every expert providing reliable information, there may be a couple of other people giving false information.

Strong passwords are of the utmost importance. The more complex the password, the more protected your information will be from cyber threats and hackers.

eTwinning